

External Assessment Report 2012

Subject(s)	Retail Travel
Level(s)	Higher

The statistics used in this report are pre-appeal.

This report provides information on the performance of candidates which it is hoped will be useful to teachers/lecturers in their preparation of candidates for future examinations. It is intended to be constructive and informative and to promote better understanding. It would be helpful to read this report in conjunction with the published question papers and marking instructions for the examination.

Comments on candidate performance

General comments

Two centres presented candidates for Retail Travel and in general the process was well managed and a number of submissions were of a reasonably high standard. Flysheet covers were completed with students' signatures to confirm that the projects presented were the students' own work. Evidence of cross-marking was clear from comments noted on candidates' individual summary sheets, and sampling undertaken was noted on each college's Internal Verification documents.

Detailed checklists were used by both centres to support the marks allocation for technical ability, in relation to documentation, along with the summary marks sheets for each stage of the project, indicating clearly the level of support offered to the candidate.

Administrative documents prepared for the clients (eg letters to the client, itineraries and supplementary information) were well presented in word-processed format by most candidates. Opportunities to integrate Core Skills learning with the project were developed by both centres, which was considered good practice. However, care must be taken to avoid skewing the project content, for example, to meet the format requirements of report writing for communication assessment.

Candidates in both centres were encouraged to keep a logbook or diary of their progress to support all stages of the project. Brochures/manuals used were readily available, and the majority of candidates presented appropriate printed internet pages as reference sources in the Development Stage of their project.

Areas in which candidates performed well

Many candidates, particularly from one centre, performed well in the Planning Stage of the project. Those whose marks were fully justified presented well-prepared plans which included aims, SMART objectives, and flow charts with clear timescales for the completion of tasks.

Many candidates performed well in the Development Stage. This section of the project was generally well presented, with substantial research undertaken by candidates. Access to internet facilities and the use of trade reference sources — including a variety of tour operators' brochures — was clearly evidenced in most cases.

A few candidates approached the task in a manner that demonstrated professional retail skills — presenting the relevant information in a format that was easy to read and attractive for the customer, and completing documents accurately and to trade standard.

Areas which candidates found demanding

Some candidates did not perform as well as could have been expected in the Planning Stage. If candidates grasp the importance of setting SMART objectives and order their tasks, they should find the following stages much easier. Time spent preparing the candidate for writing their plan is invaluable.

Candidates, as usual, found the Evaluation Stage particularly demanding. Improvement in the quality of work presented in this section of the project has been evident over the last few years, but the majority of candidates still perform least well in this section.

Candidates must be encouraged to produce a more detailed evaluation of their approach to the project. This is usually better achieved by those who can draw from the work undertaken to produce their detailed planning flowchart and logbook of progress throughout the project. Candidates can comment on their ability to adhere to their plan, using their notes concerning difficulties encountered and solutions to overcome these.

Care must be taken by centres when allocating marks to this section to ensure that candidates include sufficient evidence to warrant the marks awarded.

Advice to centres for preparation of future candidates

The timing of the introduction of the project is critical. It is important that the candidate is competent in the skills required to undertake the Retail Travel Project. These are gained through outcomes in Travel Agency Practice & Procedures and Surface Travel. However, it is also vitally important that its introduction is not left too late, to avoid candidates being overwhelmed by the pressure of completing the project by the end of May.

Allocation of sufficient class time for project work is essential preferably with access to all relevant resources, including internet access. Students must be advised that they will also be required to spend a substantial amount of their own study time researching information and writing it up. Administrative and travel documentation should, though, be completed under supervised conditions with access to all notes, and perhaps tutor-prepared sample documents in a reference folder.

Many candidates have little experience in the area of planning, and some practice exercises can be done in the class before embarking on the briefs. It is important that the candidate is comfortable with the concept of aims and objectives of the project and does not simply list tasks to be undertaken.

Once the candidate decides on the brief he/she would like to tackle, the planning procedure used in the practice exercises can be adopted. The 500 words allocated to the planning stage should be presented in prose format rather than as bullet points. After the candidate has justified his/her choice of brief, he/she should summarise the information required and the approach to be taken for the chosen brief only. Candidates must remember to include information sources to be consulted, resources to be utilised and details of the documentation that will be required to be issued.

Information presented in the planning flowchart, including timescales, does not require to be counted in the 500 word allocation for the Planning Stage.

It is vital that a project a logbook or diary is completed throughout the project by the candidate. This should be used to record any difficulties encountered and the solution found. It also acts as a check on adherence to the timescales planned for each task. These notes will be of considerable assistance when writing up the Evaluation stage of the project.

The summary checklists and additional checklists provided by SQA make marking straightforward. Projects should be cross-marked to ensure consistency of marking across staff and class groups. It should be noted that half-marks should not be allocated.

In the Development Stage it is important for the candidate to research different products from different operators; give detailed information about each suggested product, including an accurate costing; and justify his/her choice. It is vitally important that the candidate effectively extracts accurate and relevant information to present to the client in an attractive and easy to read format and in the candidate's own words.

Any internet printouts should be retained as evidence only and presented in the appendix to the project. These must not be presented to the client with highlighted information suggesting the appropriate choice of product for the client.

All documentation should be completed to trade standard (detailed and accurate). It should include word-processed letters, and ideally an itinerary for each client who is setting off from a different departure point or following a different itinerary. The clients' itinerary should include accurate check-in, departure and arrival times for all travel arrangements.

The client booking file must reflect all products booked and be an accurate record of all financial transactions. It is recommended that candidates are directed to offer an insurance policy which would realistically be sold by a travel agency. It would be appropriate if candidates were encouraged to sell the insurance policy that is used in the Travel Agency Practice and Procedures unit. They must be instructed to issue a proposal form.

As the Evaluation Stage of the project is the area that candidates find most difficult, it may be helpful if some additional tutor input to teach evaluating is offered by centres.

Good use of the planning flowchart and logbook to record progress/difficulties does help candidates to give a fuller response to this section.

Candidate performance could be improved by ensuring adequate time is allocated to this section. Good time management must also be encouraged, as many candidates fall behind schedule at this point and are faced with having to complete outstanding assessments for other units in their programme. Some candidates find the demands on their time overwhelming at this stage, so there is a risk that less time and effort may go into the Evaluation Stage than the other two stages.

General commentary on grade boundaries

- ◆ While SQA aims to set examinations and create marking instructions which will allow a competent candidate to score a minimum of 50% of the available marks (the notional C boundary) and a well prepared, very competent candidate to score at least 70% of the available marks (the notional A boundary), it is very challenging to get the standard on target every year, in every subject at every level.
- ◆ Each year SQA therefore holds a grade boundary meeting for each subject at each level where it brings together all the information available (statistical and judgemental). The Principal Assessor and SQA Qualifications Manager meet with the relevant SQA Business Manager and Statistician to discuss the evidence and make decisions. The meetings are chaired by members of the management team at SQA.
- ◆ The grade boundaries can be adjusted downwards if there is evidence that the exam is more challenging than usual, allowing the pass rate to be unaffected by this circumstance.
- ◆ The grade boundaries can be adjusted upwards if there is evidence that the exam is less challenging than usual, allowing the pass rate to be unaffected by this circumstance.
- ◆ Where standards are comparable to previous years, similar grade boundaries are maintained.
- ◆ An exam paper at a particular level in a subject in one year tends to have a marginally different set of grade boundaries from exam papers in that subject at that level in other years. This is because the particular questions, and the mix of questions, are different. This is also the case for exams set in centres. If SQA has already altered a boundary in a particular year in, say, Higher Chemistry this does not mean that centres should necessarily alter boundaries in their prelim exam in Higher Chemistry. The two are not that closely related as they do not contain identical questions.
- ◆ SQA's main aim is to be fair to candidates across all subjects and all levels and maintain comparable standards across the years, even as arrangements evolve and change.
