

Previous finalist: FE Colleges

Mark Phillips, Edinburgh's Telford College

Mark worked on ideas of body writing to portray his idea of silencing racism. He incorporated the writing on his hand and covered his mouth to reinforce his "silence" message.

Previous finalist: Primary 5-7

Aidan McCallum, Star Primary School, Glenrothes

As part of his classwork on Rights Respecting Schools, Aidan studied Article 2 of The Rights of the Child. This poster expresses his thoughts and feelings on racism in Scotland. He understands there is no place for racism and wants to do all he can to make sure Scotland is an anti-racist society.

Previous finalist: Secondary 4-6

Sarah Malorie Ali, Stonelaw High School, Glasgow

This piece of artwork displays two people that want to unite together but their skin colour and religious beliefs appear to hold them back. The characters are holding up a cross and an Islamic crescent moon, with a star in the background representing the Star of David — the symbol of Judaism. The different backgrounds show differences in the characters different worlds.

Creative Competition 2013 Anti-Racism Anti-Sectarianism

Show Racism the Red Card, the UK's premier anti-racism charity, which uses professional footballers as anti-racism role models, has joined forces with the Scottish Qualifications Authority (SQA) to support the 2013 Creative Competition.

We know that there is brilliant creative talent in Scotland's schools and colleges, and we want to use that talent to get across the message that racism and sectarianism have no place in an inclusive and tolerant Scotland.

The 2013 Competition is supported by:

- » Education Scotland
- » Educational Institute of Scotland
- » GMB
- » PFA Scotland
- » Scottish Football Association (SFA)
- » Scottish Football League (SFL)
- » Scottish Premier League (SPL)
- » Scottish Qualifications Authority (SQA)
- » The Scottish Government
- » Unison
- » Unite

All you have to do to enter is develop a piece of creative work that gets across loud and clear our message that racism and sectarianism are not welcome in Scotland!

- It could be
- » artwork
  - » poetry
  - » short story
  - » creative writing
  - » music
  - » dance or drama performance
  - » research project
  - » multimedia presentation

In fact it could be anything that is creative, inspirational and stimulated by the anti-racism and anti-sectarianism message. Entries are welcome from individuals and class groups.

Finalists will be invited to a star-studded awards ceremony at Scotland's National Stadium, Hampden Park, attended by the elite of Scottish football, to receive public acclaim for their work and receive superb prizes.

Detailed information for teachers and lecturers, full competition rules and application forms are on our website www.sqa.org.uk/redcard. The closing date for entries is Friday 25 January 2013.

This is a great opportunity to work with Show Racism the Red Card and SQA to show we are serious about making Scotland a fair and inclusive society – we hope you will be part of it.
