UNIT Investigating Europe (Intermediate 1)

This part of the unit specification is offered as guidance. None of the sections of the support notes is mandatory.

GUIDANCE ON CONTENT AND CONTEXT

Corresponding to outcomes 1-4:

- 1 The possible contexts for a European investigation are wide ranging, covering, for example, culture, society, environment, politics, education, transport, consumer issues, leisure, finance etc. This list is not prescriptive and tutors/trainers will find that a range of other contexts provides appropriate topics for investigation which encourages the candidates to develop appropriate planning, organisational, investigative and interpersonal skills, and self-awareness.

Candidates may wish to focus their investigations on countries within the European Union with the exception of Scotland, England, Wales and Northern Ireland. Investigations undertaken into European countries outwith the EU are equally valid. Tutors/trainers should encourage topic choice which enables candidates to follow their own interests and to exploit the range of resources available on European issues.

- 2 The investigation techniques employed must be appropriate to the investigation. Candidates should be encouraged to use a variety of techniques as appropriate to particular contexts or issues. The range of investigation techniques which can be employed includes interviews; questionnaires; photographs; audio and video recordings; appeals for information and opinions via local press; library research; museum research; map work; 'opinion polls'; surveys; discussion with nationals of other European countries living in the local community.

Where possible, use might be made of European embassies and consulates, European Institutes, university departments, Commission of the European Union's Information Office, tourist offices of European countries, newspapers and radio/TV programmes and the Internet.

Although a visit to another European country is not essential for this unit, many candidates do have the opportunity to visit Europe and where the investigation activity can be enhanced by such a visit, this should be discussed with the candidate so that all opportunities are explored.

Candidates, with limited support from the tutor/trainer, should organise resources to carry out the investigation plan, implement the plan, keep an accurate record of the investigation procedures and report accurately on the investigation findings. The form which these records take may vary but each candidate should maintain a folder of material containing information on the planning and execution of the project and the investigation findings.

UNIT Investigating Europe (Intermediate 1)

The findings can be presented in a variety of forms, including video recordings, tape slide presentations, written reports supported by graphical material, photographs, wall posters etc.

- 3 Each candidate should gather information from people during the investigation. Tutors/trainers should ensure that methods of investigation and information retrieval provide opportunities for candidates to develop interpersonal skills. In an investigation into the culture of another European country, for instance, candidates might be encouraged to question visiting speakers, interview local historians or older members of the community, contact societies, institutes, embassies etc representing the country.

Candidates should demonstrate interpersonal skills in working cooperatively with others within the group, in approaching contacts, encouraging their cooperation, obtaining information and reviewing and responding to opinions of the tutors/trainers and others on the progress of the investigation. Candidates should show evidence of seeking advice and assistance where necessary and of modifying behaviour as appropriate to the needs of different situations.

- 4 Towards the end of the unit each candidate should review the investigation activity and what has been gained from the exercise. There should be a review of progress towards the achievement of the goals identified earlier in the unit. The learning gained should be identified and personal feelings and reactions towards this learning should be expressed. Candidates should review the value of the learning experience to their own personal and social development.

GUIDANCE ON TEACHING AND LEARNING APPROACHES

In this unit candidates may choose whether to undertake the investigation individually or in groups. However, if a group approach is preferred each candidate must maintain an individual record of his or her part of the investigation. It is expected that in the course of the unit each candidate will compile a folder of assessment evidence containing self assessments, planning sheets of the proposed investigation, log sheets which record the activities undertaken by the candidates in the process of the investigation, material (in appropriate print or non-print format) which represents the results of the investigation activities and a final review sheet with reflections on the investigation process and its relevance to personal and social development.

Involving candidates in the decisions which affect them is valuable for personal development as well as being a powerful motivating factor. Among the areas for negotiation in this unit are:

membership of investigation groups; choice of investigation topics; roles within groups and allocation of tasks to group members; methods of investigation; methods of recording results of investigation.

UNIT Investigating Europe (Intermediate 1)

This unit can be used in a number of ways eg:

- as a follow-up to Local Investigations 1 or 2 it can assist candidates to identify similarities and differences between local patterns of living, culture, environment etc and those in Europe
- as a follow-up to Experiencing Europe 1 or as a complement to one of the Experiencing Europe units to assist candidates to investigate in more detail a European theme in which an interest has been developed. It could also be integrated with a unit on Experiencing Europe
- before candidates visit Europe to provide a useful framework for preparatory activity in finding out about the European country to be visited.

Corresponding to outcomes 1-4:

- 1 Induction to the unit including explanation of its key features and establishing working relationships. An important role of the tutor/trainer is to act as facilitator to provide the appropriate framework and climate where candidates can take responsibility for decision making, planning, organising and problem solving.

Appropriate tutor/trainer input will take the form of limited support for candidates who have little experience of methods of planning, monitoring progress, gathering information and presenting results. A variety of approaches might be appropriate, including short talks by candidates who have experience, a study of examples of investigation reports, discussions leading to individuals or the group drawing up notes for guidance.

Candidates should identify a topic for investigation with limited tutor/trainer support. A definition of what might be included in a European investigation must be agreed and possible content should be discussed between candidate and tutor/trainer.

Candidates should be allowed to choose a topic which follows their own interests and allows exploitation of the resources available on European issues. Advice from the tutor/trainer may be required as to the complexity of particular issues.

Establishing a base of knowledge for investigations in the European context can be achieved through a variety of methods eg visiting speakers, case studies, radio and TV documentaries, visits to libraries. This phase of the unit should be limited and merely provide the framework for subsequent investigation activities.

- 2 Each candidate or group undertakes the investigation, maintains accurate records of the investigation's procedures and reports on the findings. During this phase the tutor's/trainer's role is to provide limited support as required. However, the candidate must demonstrate that he or she can effectively monitor his or her own investigation activities. It is important that the initiative lies with the candidate. The tutor/trainer must make a judgement regarding the timing and degree of intervention should problems arise. The findings of each investigation should be considered and discussed by the group as a whole. The sharing of knowledge and experience gained is valuable and the presence of an audience for the findings creates a sense of purpose.
- 3 All learning activities should be designed to develop personal and social development skills. Individual or group exercises to enable candidates to identify qualities and skills necessary for successful investigation activities may be used. These might include tutor/trainer exposition, case studies, role play. Tutors/trainers should thus attempt to ensure that problems relating to investigation techniques and methods are anticipated before tasks are undertaken. Candidates should also be assisted with preparation for learning through the investigation activities through practice of personal and social development skills involved such as interviewing skills, group work, time-management, record keeping, presentation of findings, self-evaluation.
- 4 In a short interview with each individual the tutor/trainer will discuss the initial planning process and the activities undertaken throughout the unit and the feelings of the candidates towards these. Tutors/trainers should not prompt performance but should create an atmosphere and framework within which candidates are encouraged to speak openly about their progress towards the defined goals, their feelings and reactions in relation to the tasks undertaken and the contribution which the learning activities have made towards their own personal and social development.

GUIDANCE ON APPROACHES TO ASSESSMENT

During the unit the candidate is required to plan and undertake a European investigation during which he or she should assemble a folder of assessment evidence in relation to the outcomes. Personal interviews are central to the assessment and will be used to explore the candidate's experience of the investigation tasks in relation to the stated performance criteria.

The tutor/trainer may conduct personal interviews with individual candidates or with groups, as appropriate. The interviews will take place on an on-going basis throughout the unit and should draw on relevant evidence from the candidate's assessment folder.

UNIT Investigating Europe (Intermediate 1)

Centres may use the Instruments of Assessment which are considered by tutors/trainers to be the most appropriate. Examples of Instruments of Assessment which could be used are as follows:

Corresponding to outcomes 1-4:

- 1 Personal interview drawing on evidence from self assessment and planning sheet.
- 2 Personal interview drawing on evidence from planning sheet, log sheet and record of findings of investigation in appropriate format.
- 3 Personal interview drawing on evidence from log sheet.
- 4 Personal interview using review sheet.

SPECIAL NEEDS

This unit specification is intended to ensure that there are no artificial barriers to learning or assessment. Special needs of individual candidates should be taken into account when planning learning experiences, selecting assessment instruments or considering alternative outcomes for units. For information on these, please refer to the SQA document Guidance on Special Assessment and Certification Arrangements (SQA, 1998).
