Whaapp Limited

One afternoon Craig Angus was at home and needed to book a taxi to go out for dinner. Being an iPhone user he thought that there must be “an app for that”. However, to his surprise there was nothing available in the App Store.

A month later he was on holiday reading an American business magazine. About 80% of the magazine’s content was on how mobile applications were becoming big business. After speaking with his friends, and with the help of Prince’s Scottish Youth Business Trust (PSYBT) they set up Whaapp Limited with the goal of bringing TaxiApp to market.

TaxiApp will be the first app launched during 2012 that will allow users to instantly book a taxi through their mobile phone. The app will register the user’s location through GPS, alerting registered taxi firms who can then accept the fare and collect the customer directly from their location.

TaxiApp will enable anyone to conveniently book a taxi to pick them up from their current location or order for a different location, 24 hours per day. This reduces the need for users to walk the streets to get a taxi, ultimately helping to maintain people’s safety.

Whaapp will also add a deals section that will allow its customers to find out about offers and vouchers from businesses in their current location or at their taxi drop off point.

In the future Whaapp hopes to build more apps and extend this service to design apps for other companies.

Glasgow-based Shearer Candles Fulfils Burning Ambition

Background

Shearer Candles Ltd is located in Glasgow. It is a family run candle business that was established in 1897. It is now recognised as one of Scotland's leading candle manufacturers with sales of over £3 million a year and employing over 50 people.

Shearer Candles has developed from a small company producing church candles. It now offers a large range of candles including scented candles, jar candles, tea lights and candle accessories. The company supplies leading retailers, hotels, restaurants, supermarket chains and department stores. In 2012 it also won a contract to supply candles to supermarket chain Sainsbury's.

Quality

The company prides itself on delivering high quality candles that contain only the purest and finest ingredients. It is proud to be a member of The British Candlemakers Federation and The Giftware Association. Recently, Shearer Candles was awarded a Grade A certificate, the highest grade achievable by the British Retail Consortium. To maintain its high levels of quality Shearer Candles has invested in expensive new technology.

The Future

The company currently exports candles all over the world and this accounts for about 10% of its sales. Sales are expected to double over the next year.
