Scottish Anti-drug Collaborative: information on drug consumption rooms

It was recently revealed that 1,330 people tragically lost their lives to drugs in Scotland in 2021. This equated to over 250 drug deaths per million people. Recent trends have shown a change in the age profile of drug death victims but deaths remain high so there is still work to be done.

The Scottish Anti-drug Collaborative is calling for the introduction of drug consumption rooms (DCRs) in Scotland. DCRs are places where illegal drugs can be taken under the supervision of trained staff. Chief Executive Rodney Woridio said, 'Drug consumption rooms are supervised by trained staff and have been used across Europe. They can help reduce drug deaths and the transmission of HIV and hepatitis. Evidence from other European countries suggests they would help save Scottish lives.' He also said, 'We first raised this issue in 2013 when Scotland had 527 drug-related fatalities'.

The need for DCRs is shown most starkly in Scotland's poorest areas where, as measured by the Scottish Index of Multiple Deprivation (SIMD), drug deaths are highest. SIMD quintile 1 areas are the 20% most deprived postcodes in Scotland whereas SIMD quintile 5 areas are the 20% least deprived. It is in SIMD quintile 1 and 2 areas where the biggest change could be made. Drug deaths are 18 times higher in the 700 most deprived postcodes than in the 700 least deprived ones.

While the Scottish Government supports the introduction of DCRs, the UK Government believes that introducing DCRs for the injection of illegal drugs would contravene the Misuse of Drugs Act. They therefore believe that facilities for supervising the consumption of illegal drugs would be against the law and are not appropriate. In contrast, there are currently DCRs in several European countries including Switzerland, Germany, Luxembourg and Denmark.

Statistics related to selected local authorities in Scotland
Local authority	Drug-related deaths per million people (2017-21)	Average overall SIMD quintile (1=most deprived, 5=least deprived)	Crime rate (per 10,000 people 2020-21)
Glasgow City	444	2.2	147
South Lanarkshire	239	2.9	58
Stirling	228	3.5	88
Dundee City	452	2.5	159
Fife	200	3.0	85
East Renfrewshire	110	4.1	45
Aberdeenshire	89	3.8	58

Attempt the following question, using only the information in Sources A, B, C and D on pages 03, 04 and above.

What conclusions can be drawn about drug deaths in Scotland?

You must draw conclusions about:

- the link between deprivation and drug deaths
- the age of drug death victims over time
- the impact of drug consumption rooms on drug deaths.

You must also make an overall conclusion on the extent of Scotland's drug death problem over recent years.

News in the UK

Today in the UK, people can keep up to date with news in a variety of ways. Traditional media platforms – newspapers, television and the radio – have long been the preferred source of news. However, according to recent surveys, around two-thirds of adults in the UK use new media, such as news websites and social media, as an important source of news, a number that continues to grow each year.

Concern has grown over the influence that new media networks like Facebook and Twitter have on the way political stories are presented with many questioning the accuracy and trustworthiness of these platforms as sources of news. While Facebook has become a popular source of news in Britain it has become one of the least trusted. Television, radio and newspapers are all regarded as much more trustworthy than new media. Problems with ‘fake news’ is often cited for the lack of trust in new media as a news source.

Television remains the most popular news source among the population with most using it as their main platform. Most people watch television every day and rank BBC One as their preferred overall news source, followed closely by ITV. These channels have been particularly important during election campaigns with 7.3 million tuning in to watch ITV’s leadership debate between Boris Johnson and Jeremy Corbyn. However, surveys show that the importance of television has declined every year.

Printed newspapers have become one of the least popular forms of media with just over one-third preferring them as their main source of news. This drop in sales corresponds to the rise in popularity of new media. The country’s most popular newspaper, the Daily Mail, falls behind both Facebook and Twitter as a choice of news source.

‘The British media is splitting along generational and ethnic lines’

Recently, the Guardian reported that young people in UK have abandoned TV news almost entirely. While the average person aged 65 and over watches 33 minutes of television news a day, this falls to just two minutes among young people.

The Office of Communications (Ofcom) reported that some people feel BBC content reflects the lives of white middle-class people more than those from more diverse backgrounds. This may explain why groups like the young and ethnic minorities have abandoned some forms of traditional media in favour of the internet whilst older and white people in the UK have largely stuck with it as a preferred source of news.

Annual sales of newspapers have fallen by around 50% in the last decade. However, some newspapers, particularly the Daily Mail and the Guardian, have managed to build a younger, more diverse audience by attracting readers to their websites instead. The Guardian newspaper’s daily sales were only 105,000 in 2021 but its online readership was much larger.

Attempt the following question, using only the information in Sources A, B, C and D on page 06 and above.

To what extent is it accurate to state that traditional media platforms are the main providers of news for people in the UK?
