Contents and notes

Where appropriate, answer keys are included for learners to check their work. You should photocopy certain worksheets.

Page	Activity
1	Form-filling — teacher's notes
2	The name game — teacher's notes
4	Key words for personal identity and form-filling — cards for recognition, ordering and matching; good for social sight assessment
5	Role-play cards: name, country and nationality. These can be used to practise structures (What's your name? My name's ... What's his/her name? etc) in mingling or group activities. Learners can then cover the information and look at the pictures to check memory.
*11	Please note that Kujtim is described as British as he has been naturalised. This might be an interesting talking point for learners and a useful introduction to the concepts of citizenship and naturalisation. Follow-on activities with simple writing
17	Dates and date-of-birth materials, including: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • information and substitution tables to teach cardinal and ordinal numbers • month cards for cutting up and ordering (the cards themselves can be cut into syllables for reconstructing) • writing, speaking and listening exercises for d.o.b. • d.o.b. 'bingo', with a teacher's master card and student cards to be cut up Remind learners that when we say these dates we say 'the 1st of January' but when we write, we miss out 'the' and 'of'.

29	Form-filling, including: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • a simple form with a matching exercise • a more complex form with deleting, circling and underlining Teachers' notes on additional ideas/activities with forms are provided on page 1. Any work with names and addresses is good assessment practice for Literacies 2.
33	Countries, continents and languages. Suggested use: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Pre-teach/elicit the continents and ask students to identify these on the map (page 33). • Students match the countries to the continents using cards (page 34) — the cards can be adapted according to learners' nationalities. • Use page 35 for a mingling speaking activity. Practise the necessary questions. For students with very low literacy, names etc can be copied from cards. Use this as the basis for simple speaking/writing activities with the structures: I am from _____ in _____. X is from _____ in _____. • There are also simple speaking and writing activities about learners' languages. Adapt these according to needs.
39	Writing, punctuation and capitalisation exercises to follow from above.
42	Word-shapes exercise: cities. Students match the city names to the shapes and fill in the boxes. Can be adapted to teach the shapes of any key lexis.

*44	Reading and writing a simple personal letter, including: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• genre identification and comprehension• literacy work — phonics, sentencing and layout• gap-fill• personalisation

Form-filling activities

(NB A sample form for learners to complete is provided on page 30.)

Different types of forms should be used throughout the course to build confidence in writing personal information as well as to assist real-life and assessment tasks. Some activities which may be of use are as follows:

- cut up addresses for learners to re-order, to build awareness of sequencing (flat/house, street, area, city, postcode)
- write out learners' personal information with spelling mistakes for correction
- as above, missing out vowels, digraphs or blends for learners to insert
- cut out different parts of address etc to be inserted or pasted onto a blank form before being copied
- dictate names, addresses and telephone numbers
- teach questions for learners to interview each other and fill out each other's personal information
- play bingo with telephone numbers, postcodes and dates of birth

Teacher's notes

The name game

This can be used with a new group of beginner students, particularly for those who have some knowledge of the alphabet and some ability to form it (for those with no such knowledge, it may be very daunting). It is useful as an ice-breaker as well as to diagnose particular issues with reading, spelling and letter formation.

- 1 Find out your students' names before the class begins and prepare A4 cards with the names spelled out in large letters. For each student, write or print out three large cards — one with the correct spelling in English, and two others with mistakes, eg for a student named Foursat:

Fousat	Foursat	Frst

- 2 Tack the cards onto the whiteboard or around the room, in random order.
- 3 After introducing yourself to the students and requesting their names, ask them to find their names on the wall. Assist as necessary, but allow the students to make their own choices. Take note of any errors, and gently point out to those students that this spelling differs from the one they registered with. Encourage them to notice the difference for themselves.

Teacher's notes

- 4 When students are happy that they have their correct name, ask if they know the names of the letters which make up their names. Demonstrate with your own name. Even for students with very limited knowledge of the English alphabet, the sequence of letters which makes up their names can be taught in this first lesson.
- 5 While teaching this, introduce the questions 'What's your name?' and 'What's the spelling?' Demonstrate with your own name and write it on the board.
- 6 When students can ask and respond to these questions, line them up behind you, facing the whiteboard. Ask the student behind you the two questions, and write their name on the board. Check with the student that this is correct, then pass them the board pen. They then turn around and ask the student behind them the same questions, and in turn attempt to write the name on the board.
- 7 The activity continues in sequence. Fall in line behind the final student so she/he can ask you the questions.
- 8 Throughout the activity, and during feedback, take note of particular problems that occur. These can then form the basis of future lessons on letter formation, spelling, phonics and alphabet awareness.
