MPs second jobs fact file

- MPs are allowed to take second jobs as long as they are not a government minister.
- There is no limit in terms of the time MPs can spend on any second job.
- MPs currently receive a basic annual salary of £91,346. The average salary in the UK is less than half of this.
- MPs are required to declare any earnings they make outside of Parliament, as well as any gifts, donations or shareholdings.
- No political party supports an outright ban on all second jobs.

[Braille page 5] • Traditionally, MPs having second jobs helped ensure that Parliament was filled with experienced professionals, from a range of diverse industries and backgrounds thus bringing a greater wealth of experience, expertise and insight into the House of Commons.

- A debate took place in the House of Commons in July 2024 to tighten rules on MPs having second jobs.
- Recent polls suggest there is public support for MPs having a second job although this is dependent on what that job is.
- Some MPs have received millions of pounds through second jobs and have become very wealthy as a result.
- There was controversy in 2021 when one MP had to resign for breaking the MPs' code of conduct after lobbying government departments to benefit the private company he was working for.
- Second jobs gives MPs job security should they be defeated at the next election.

Constituents' viewpoints

Kiera McAulay

MPs should not be allowed to have second jobs. As there are no restrictions on the time MPs can spend on second jobs, it can often take them away from their parliamentary work and representing their constituents effectively. Being an MP is a well-paid job and so there should not be a need for them to top-up their income with a second job. It is for these reasons that the majority of the general public in every nation of the UK support a ban on second [Braille page 7] jobs. Some MPs act as consultants to businesses that are looking to gain government support — MPs should not be giving political advice to private companies or using their position to gain influence for big businesses and therefore breaching the standards expected of elected representatives. Most political parties agree with an outright ban on second jobs.

Zac Faichney

Despite recent media headlines, MPs having second jobs isn't all bad. The general public recognises that some second jobs can be very beneficial to society, such as those working as NHS doctors and army reservists. Allowing MPs to have second jobs also brings a greater diversity of people to the House of Commons and is an important way for MPs to gain experience of working life outside politics, which can only be of benefit to their constituents. It is clear that MPs don't earn a lot of money from their second jobs. We also have to be fair to our MPs as not being allowed a second job may make them unemployed if they no longer remain an MP. It is for all these reasons that it has been years since the House of Commons has debated [Braille page 8] on the issue of second jobs.

Now You must decide which option to recommend, either ban MPs from having second jobs (Option 1) or do not ban MPs from having second jobs (Option 2).

- (i) Using Sources 1, 2 and 3, which option would you choose?
- (ii) Give reasons to support your choice.
- (iii) Explain why you did not choose the other option.

Your answer must be based on all three sources. [10 marks]

Minimum unit pricing for alcohol

Minimum unit pricing for alcohol (MUP) was introduced by the Scottish Government in 2018 as a response to the nation's poor relationship with alcohol and their desire to make it less affordable. MUP was implemented at a rate of 50p per unit after a long legal battle between the Scottish Government and the drinks industry. This rate increased to 65p per unit in September 2024. The price increase of alcohol due to MUP has led to some economically vulnerable people experiencing increased financial strain as they spend more on alcohol than they can afford. This can lead to those who are dependent on alcohol reducing other spending, such as that on food and utilities.

According to recent studies, since the introduction of MUP, alcohol sales in Scotland have fallen. The alcohol products that MUP has specifically targeted, such as strong ciders and spirits, have seen the biggest reduction in sales since the pricing policy was implemented. However, among those drinking at harmful levels or people [Braille page 11] who are dependent on alcohol, there has been no clear evidence of a change in alcohol consumption.

A high number of deaths in Scotland continue to be linked to alcohol. On the other hand, according to research it is estimated that each year, on average, MUP has saved 268 lives and has prevented 899 hospital admissions.

Refer to the table below that shows the results from a Public opinion survey — "Do you buy less alcohol because of MUP?" and the diagram for Question 14 that shows the "Number of deaths due to alcohol".

[In the table below, Opinion is followed by: percentage.]

Strongly agree: 25.

Agree: 27.

Disagree: 33.

Strongly disagree: 15.

Have your say on MUP

Simone

MUP has saved hundreds of lives that would otherwise have ended in early deaths, as well as reducing the number needing hospital care which in turn has saved the NHS money.

Fergus

My friend drinks too much and MUP has simply meant he spends more to maintain his drinking habits which hurts him financially.

Khabib

Scotland was the first country in the world to implement minimum unit pricing for alcohol and we should be proud of this.

Dr Yang

I see patients every week who are dependent on alcohol and their situation hasn't improved since MUP was introduced.

Joe

I don't drink strong cider or spirits anymore as it is simply too expensive.

Professor Barbour

Our research has shown MUP has reduced alcohol sales in Scotland, and this has undoubtedly benefitted the nation's [Braille page 13] health.

Fjolla

I heard on the news that deaths due to alcohol continue to increase. This proves MUP isn't working.

Using Sources 1, 2 and 3 give reasons to support and oppose the view of Jess Porter.

Female representation in Canadian politics

In 1921, the first woman was elected to the House of Commons of Canada. Today, it holds a record number of female members. In the 2021 federal election, of the 338 members elected, 103 were women. Of those, 22 were elected for the first time. This represents an increase of five seats over the previous record of 98 women who were elected in 2019. In terms of female representation in Parliament, Canada ranks 66th in the world. The female population in Canada is 50.36% compared to 49.64% being male.

There is significant political pressure to increase the number of women representatives in the House of Commons. Some Canadian political parties have pledged to include more female representation in government by introducing certain measures to increase both participation and representation. These measures have included all-woman shortlists, gender quotas and woman-only seats. However, not everyone supports these [Braille page 17] measures.

Provincial and territorial legislatures in Canada face similar issues in achieving gender equality between men and women. By the end of 2024, women represented 35.3% (273 out of 772) of all provincial and territorial legislators across Canada as a whole.
